Benefits of attending

In Amenas was a game changer.

It demonstrated that oil & gas companies are now being specifically targeted by terrorist organisations. And the evolving security threats don't stop there.

With threats such as border security, extremism and political instability, now is the time to take proactive steps to prevent, predict and protect against the security threats you face when operating in North Africa.

The North African Oil & Gas Infrastructure Security conference is unique in providing access to region-specific information and intelligence on how to take a proactive approach towards your security strategy. Bringing together a mix of government and industry speakers and participants, the vital discussions had will provide you with the intelligence, tools and contacts to implement a robust security strategy.

Attend North African Oil & Gas Infrastructure Security and:

- Understand the current political situation in Libya and what this means for your operations in the region: UK Defence Advisory Team provides an intelligence update and strategic advice on border security considerations
- Reduce your vulnerabilities based on Baker Hughes' six risk-based decision making factors: Create and maintain a strategy that factors in current and predicated security threats
- Discover how to conduct successful business operations in an increasingly complex political and security landscape: Technip reveals its experiences of operating in Libya and strategic proprieties for the next 6-12 months
- Find out how you will benefit from improved communication and transparency: KBR showcases steps being taken to create a regional and national information infrastructure within Libya
- Understand the value of intelligence in security and evaluate the additional protection measures available to you: From managing a guard force to implementing innovative security technologies, evaluate and benchmark with Dana Petroleum, BG Group and OMV
- Take proactive measures to minimise your risk of being targeted: Understand what the future holds for North Africa and how you can take proactive measures to minimise your risk of being targeted

Who should attend?

Expect to meet the following representatives from oil & gas operating and service companies:

- General Managers
- Global Heads of Security

Pre-Conference Workshop: Improving Incident Response & Crisis Management Capabilities in a Complex North African Operating EnvironmentDate: 9th December 2013
Time: 9.00 – 16.00

Whilst every incident is unique and will require a tailored response, it is paramount that essential capacities are in place before an incident occurs, to enable you to adequately manage the situation in real-time.

Attend this workshop and:

- Anticipate how and where you will be targeted based on incident trends and patterns
- Evaluate the risk mitigation measures you can implement to prevent a crisis occurring
- Understand how recent incidents have influenced the way in which crisis management should be handled
- Discuss, debate and generate solutions with your industry peers in this closed forum
- Gain insights into effective post incident management: Make sure you know what immediate and long-term actions you should take following an incident to avoid a reoccurrence and manage the fallout

You'll leave with:

- A clear understanding of the critical measures you should put in place prior to, during and after an incident
- Insights and shared experiences from your industry peers: Find out how they have tackled crises and the lessons they have learned

Interactive workshops are designed to provide the forum to share experiences and generate solutions to common problems faced by your industry peers. Workshops include scenario-based exercises, group discussions, team exercises and presentations. This is an opportunity to really get to grips with one of your biggest challenges

Post Conference Training Day: Effectively Implementing Risk Assessments And Applying Risk Intelligence To Create A Robust Security StrategyDate: 12th December 2013
Time: 9.00 – 16.00

This workshop aims to introduce the methodology and to remove some of the smoke and mirrors surrounding risk assessments. In so doing you will understand how, through effective use of the process, cost effective security measures can be applied to any organisation or facility to ensure the effective assessment and mitigation of security risks.

Attend this training day and learn:

- How to optimise the design, development and management of your intelligence capability in North Africa
- What can be learned from security risk mitigation in North Africa?
- Analysis of the latest statistics, trends and emerging intelligence
- How to apply this intelligence to increase the strength of your security strategy
- The outcome you can expect to achieve from successful implementation

You will leave with:

- A clear understanding of the best ways to utilise current intelligence to optimise your security capabilities
- A deep knowledge of best practice and critical lessons learned from industry peers
- Practical measures you can implement immediately when you return to the office to achieve a robust security strategy

At every Hanson Wade Security event, a dedicated workshop is included to ensure that the practical element of managing security can be addressed as well as the strategic and tactical. This particular course is specifically designed to ensure participants leave armed with a better understanding of what crises could occur and how to respond most effectively.

Due to the interactive and hands on nature of the course, numbers are strictly limited, and we would therefore encourage you to register your involvement early to avoid disappointment.
